

Speakers are available to discuss various topics including:

Advanced Aviation Aircraft
Aircraft Noise Reduction
Aircraft Safety
General Aviation Aircraft
The National Airspace System
Wind Tunnel Testing Technology
Wind Tunnels
Advanced Materials and Structures
International Space Station
Mars Exploration
Space Shuttle
Space Transportation
Spacecraft and Remote Sensing
Atmospheric Sciences
Computer Technology
NASA Aerospace Tech Transfer
Business Process Reengineering
Partnerships with Industry and Government
Science/Math/Engineering Careers

To request a speaker, contact:

NASA Langley Research Center

Public Services Office

757-864-3309

or see the web site at:

<http://oea.larc.nasa.gov/speaker.html>

For a speaker from NASA Headquarters or other centers, contact:

NASA Headquarters Speakers Bureau Coordinator

Diane Mangel

dmangel@mail.hq.nasa.gov

202-358-1751

Langley Research Center

SPEAKERS
BUREAU

SPEAKERS BUREAU

The Speakers Bureau is a volunteer organization made up of civil servants, contractors, and retirees who represent NASA as speakers. They address civic, professional, educational, and other non-profit organizations.

In addition to responding to the local community, Langley supports a five-state area, comprised of Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Kentucky.

Speakers are provided at no cost except that the requesting group might be asked to cover travel costs if it is outside a 50-mile radius from the Center.

NASA speakers do not participate in events of a political or commercial nature or where any group has been unlawfully excluded or segregated on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin.

To tell our most important customer, the American taxpayer, what we do in support of the American way of life.

VISION

MISSION

The Speakers Bureau is the Center's link with organizations and other groups who want to learn more about the work done here in Hampton, Virginia, at NASA Langley Research Center. Personnel who do the work share their projects and enthusiasm with others.

